ABOUT GSMUN

What is Model United Nations?

Model United Nations is a simulation of the United Nations and other international bodies that allows students to learn about global issues and enhance their skills in research and public speaking by representing the interests and policies of countries from around the world. Model United Nations conferences give students these unique opportunities.

The Conference

Based out of Maggie L. Walker Governor's School for Government and International Studies in Richmond, Virginia, the Governor's School Model United Nations Conference (GSMUN) is one of the longest-running and largest high school Model UN conferences on the East Coast. We host more than 500 student delegates at GSMUN each year, having welcomed schools from as far away as Illinois for a weekend of debate and learning for more than two decades.

GSMUN consistently delivers geographically and temporally diverse committees for students to participate in; this year's committees range from international and historical topics such as the Nigerian War of Independence to contemporary issues within groups such as the World Health Organization.

Each of our committees asks delegates to think critically and put their differences aside to develop innovative solutions to the world's most pressing issues, past and present. Our conference is made possible each year by our trained staff of 100+ committee chairs, vice-chairs, crisis staffers, and volunteers, who dedicate their time to GSMUN.

Our Charitable Mission

In addition to providing delegates with a unique Model UN experience, GSMUN also partners each year with a charity, typically raising $10,000+ in donation. GSMUN has worked with charities such as World Central Kitchen, World Pediatric Project, and Communities in School in past years.

This year, GSMUN is honored to be working with the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society, an organization devoted to helping patients and their loved ones navigating cancer treatment through funding cutting-edge research and providing support, education, and information.

Keynote Speakers

GSMUN also has the honor to host an incredibly remarkable keynote speaker each year. Past speakers have included former UK Prime Minister Gordon Brown, former Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke, and former Australian Prime Minister Julia Gillard, graciously made possible through a partnership with the Richmond Forum. We look forward to welcoming our keynote speaker for GSMUN XXVI.

COMMUNITY IMPACT

Our Student Team

GSMUN is an entirely student-run organization. Our staff each year consists of 100+ student committee chairs, vice-chairs, crisis staffers, and volunteers.

Every member of our staff is trained in leading a committee of 20-35 delegates, practicing parliamentary procedure, and completing a thorough background guide for their respective committee topics. GSMUN committee chairs develop their research, writing, public speaking, and leadership skills over the eight-month process leading to the conference. GSMUN alumni have gone off to study business, political science, international relations, psychology, and more following their high school careers.

By Contributing, You Can:

- Help create the next generation of community leaders and advocates
- Support student participation in diplomacy, collaboration, and public speaking
- Promote increased global awareness and civic engagement through GSMUN delegates
- Provide local high school students research and leadership experience
- Support improving public school education through our partner charity, Leukemia & Lymphoma Society
- Remove financial obstacles for students
- Have your organization affiliated with a prominent Model UN conference
- Promote your organization through GSMUN
